

New Problems Snarl Indochina Cease Fire Talks

GENEV (AP)—A scheduled meeting of Indochina experts was canceled today after the nine participating delegations decided they had run into problems which could be decided only by the top delegates.

The committee of experts met yesterday to try to overlap the various conflicting and overlapping proposals now before the Indochina conference on cease-fire measures.

The conference itself was scheduled to hold another restricted session at 9 a. m. EST. There will be no further meetings of the experts unless the full conference directs them to take up some specific problem.

Russia's Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Gromyko snarled yesterday's initial meeting of experts who are seeking to find out how much common ground there was in the Communist and non-Communist proposals.

Gromyko tossed in new demands aimed at forcing the conference to sanction Communist claims in Laos and Cambodia, the smaller of the three Associated Indochinese States.

The West has insisted the Communist-led Vietnam be allowed after it has cease-fire to hold territory only in Viet Nam and that Red forces be evacuated entirely from the kingdoms of Laos and Cambodia.

Should the Communists persist in demands for "assembly zones" in all three states, observers predict the conference might founder next week. That is the period that both France's Foreign Minister Georges Bidault and Britain's Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden have predicted would be decisive.

The Communists and the West are agreed on the principle of the assembly zones into which the opposing armies would be withdrawn when the cease-fire is sounded. But there is basic disagreement over where and how these zones should be established.

Five Commies Convicted of Conspiracy

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Five Communists were convicted by U. S. District Court jury here yesterday of conspiring to advocate forcible overthrow of the government.

A jury of 11 men and one woman returned the verdict after deliberating two hours 15 minutes.

Judge Roy W. Harper told the jury: "Your verdict is a just one. The five: 'A travesty on justice.' Sentencing was deferred until next Friday. Each faces a possible maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The convicted: Forest, 4, Missouri state chairman of the Communist party. His wife, Dorothy Rose Forest, 39, former organizational secretary of the party's Hollywood, Calif., section.

William Senter, 47, a Midwest district official of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, and long an active Communist.

Marcus A. Murphy, 46, Negro, who ran for lieutenant governor of Missouri on the Communist ticket in 1940.

The five laughed and joked among themselves while waiting for the verdict. They will remain free under bond until they are sentenced. Senter is at liberty under $15,000 bail and the others under bonds of $10,000 each.

The trial began Jan. 25, and, with frequent recesses, required 46 days of testimony, a record for federal district court here.

Judge Harper, who will pronounce sentence, said in dismissing the jury: "You can remember to your dying days the fact that you were able to sit and pass judgment and that your verdict is a just one and among your fellow Americans that will be the 'pay day' that is yours. I congratulate you."

The jury had been instructed by Judge Harper that the Communist defendants had the right to publicly express their views but that the charge, under the Smith Act, was that they engaged in a conspiracy to teach and advocate the overthrow of the government by force and violence.

Few Historians Will Ever Give the Real Feel of War as Did Frank Capa With His Camera

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—"I am a gambler," once wrote Robert Capa, whose gambling is now over. Bob, whom many regarded as the best combat photographer of his generation, explained the Doughboy pictorially as ably as his friend, Ernie Pyle, did in words.

This week Capa met Ernie's fate. He stretched a gambler's luck too far, went to one too many wars. A land mine caught him in some obscure town in Indochina and turned a fine man into a great memory.

War up front, as Bob himself said, is "dreary and unspacious." There is little to catch the camera's eye, but Capa had the high art of being at the right spot at the right moment to catch the forgettable picture.

Bob was an exponent of "the big chance." He had seen so much of war that the routine of it bored him. But on the big stories—the paratroop drops in Sicily and Germany, the invasion landings at Anzio and Normandy, the relief of besieged Bastogne—Capa liked to be in the first wave, although he was as afraid of death as most men are.

In his autobiography, "Slightly Out of Focus," he tells of brooding over what chances to take in the Normandy landing—whether to go ashore with the first troops or wait until the beaches were safer.

This is a decision every correspondent makes for himself, and Capa, mulling over the differences between the war correspondent and any other man in uniform, wrote:

"I would say that the war correspondent gets more drinks more girls, better pay, and greater freedom than the soldier; but that at this stage of the game, having the freedom to choose his spot and being allowed to be a coward and not be executed for it is his lot. The war correspondent has his stake—his life—in his own hands, and he can put it on this horse or that horse, or he can put it back in his pocket at the very last minute.

He did go in—on dead Omaha beach. He survived, came back with 106 action pictures taken on that death-strewn stretch of tide and sand. But a darkness assistant burned up all but eight negatives while drying them. If life hadn't already turned Capa into a philosopher this experience would have soured him. It didn't.

Bob was the most romantic-looking guy in the press corps. A lock of black hair hung over his forehead, a cigarette dangled eternally from his lips. He loved champagne and girls with champagne eyes. His weakness was poker, and with a losing hand he could swear unintelligible oaths in five tongues—English, French, Spanish, German and his native Hungarian.

"Capa can make himself misunderstood in more languages, including his own, than any other man living," a press officer once said.

Bob would accept no discipline except the courage that sent him after the big pictures of the big stories. He was fired as often as a boiler, dwelt in amiable poverty until the next job. But they always called him back when they needed a man they could count on for the best. He was shooting for Life magazine again at his death.

At the fall of Leipzig, the last big battle of the second world war, Capa took memorable shots of a young machine gunner the moment before a rifle bullet caught him between the eyes—and a moment later, as the boy sagged backward. "The last day, some of the best ones die," wrote Bob later, and added wryly, "but those alive will fast forget."

I believe he wrote his own epitaph better when he told of taking pictures during the bitter struggle for Troina in Sicily.

They were simple pictures and Continued on Page Three

Real Issues of Hearing Often Overshadowed

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—The people in the disjointed mixed-up and sometimes almost disorderly McCarthy hearing have all but overshadowed the issues.

Some of the most unpredictable among the people involved still face their big test: Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.); his subcommittee counsel Roy M. Cohn; Special Army Counsel Joseph N. Welch and Ray Jenkins special counsel for the Senate investigating subcommittee.

No one will have to testify as long as Robert J. Stevens the dignified secretary of the Army who was often vague and so consistently placed under McCarthy's fires that he looked dull.

When Army Counselor John G. Adams took the stand he provided some contrast but not much. His precision was almost pedantic. He answered with an unemotional brilliant voice as if he were in a classroom explaining a problem in arithmetic.

While these two almost colorless men occupied the center of the stage for weeks they looked like backdrops for more vivid people around them.

Perhaps no one in a Senate hearing ever got so much personal publicity for saying so little as Welch the 64-year-old Boston lawyer who makes a habit of bow ties and pushing his upper lip with a forefinger.

With his head, cocked in bird-like attentiveness, Welch's day after day beside his client Stevens and in his eyes there was the skeptical and detached look of a man watching magicians through a window.

Witty, gracious and almost antique in his speech Welch might have helped Stevens more if he had been less detached. Through the days that McCarthy pounded at Stevens belittling his honesty and his intelligence Welch seldom said anything. He could have interrupted to clarify a point slow up McCarthy or give Stevens a rest.

His gentleness and his reluctance to raise questions about his ability to handle McCarthy when it comes time to cross-examine the senator. His job will be to make McCarthy look like a liar since his whole case is a problem in who's lying.

McCarthy has shown signs of losing his temper easily. Capa Welch trade on this by getting McCarthy excited crossing him up confusing him or putting him to rout? At this moment Welch is an unknown quantity in this respect.

Jenkins apparently a warm and friendly man off-stage has had to wear two hats requiring a fast personality shift. First he must give each witness direct examination acting like the man's own lawyer letting the witness lay his case on the table in the best light.

He can be rough. He was criticized for treating Stevens like a convicted criminal.

The strong-jawed Jenkins a Tennesseean is now about to collide with the McCarthy side as he moves toward cross-examination of Cohn and McCarthy. This will be a test for Jenkins not only as a lawyer but perhaps as a man.

Will he tear into McCarthy and Cohn as freely and roughly as he did into Stevens and Adams? Or will McCarthy be able to awe him into timidity?

Cohn who has just started to testify has looked calm and controlled so far, but he's only stalling his case. He hasn't been cross-examined yet by Jenkins Welch or the investigating senators.

Cohn showed earlier when he was cross-examined briefly that he can work up a big head of Continued on Page Three

America to Honor Soldiers Killed in War

By The Associated Press

With prayers for a peaceful future, America honors its soldier dead once again this weekend.

The traditional rites across the nation will occupy two days this year, with some on Sunday and others on Monday, because Memorial Day falls on Sunday.

But they will be no less fervent, coming as they do at a time when the hydrogen bomb and other awesome weapons cast their dreadful shadows upon the earth.

The services will take many forms, ranging from quiet prayers to God for national guidance to the strewing of flowers upon the seas which wash America's shores.

Then, too, there will be parade and pageant.

For millions of Americans, the weekend also will signal the start of the annual vacation and travel season, the opening of resorts and the first taste of the may summertime diversions.

With much of the nation enjoying a three-day holiday, the National Safety Council estimates more than 35 million automobiles will roll along the highways, if the weather is good.

It also estimates the lives of 340 citizens will be snuffed out in the heavy travel.

Millions of other persons will travel by train, plane, bus and boat.

President Eisenhower, acting in conformity with provisions of a congressional resolution approved in 1950, issued a proclamation designating Sunday as a day of prayer for lasting peace.

The proclamation said: "We should keep faith with our heroic dead by humbly and devoutly supplicating almighty God for guidance in our efforts to achieve a peaceful world."

It then designated the hour of 11 a. m. (local time) in each locality for people to join in prayer for God's help in reaching the coveted goal of amity among nations.

Following a tradition which apparently began spontaneously in the South following the Civil War, graves will be decorated in cemeteries across the country.

At the same time there will be numerous formal memorial services conducted in the cemeteries.

Socialism Is at Stake in Aussie Vote

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Australians voted today in general elections. The balloting expected to be close—was to decide whether the country would be governed for the next three years by the coalition of Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies, which favors private enterprise, or by the Socialists.

Political experts predicted that Menzies' Liberal-Country party majority over the Socialist Labor party of Herbert V. Evatt would be even less than at present—if the government were returned. A swing of only one or two per cent in the vote might be enough to unseat it.

Recently the government has held a margin of 68 to 53 in full voting seats in the house of representatives. It had 74 to 47 when it swept labor from office in 1949, but lost much of its margin in the 1951 general elections.

Today's voting, which was compulsory for the electorate of 5,100,000 persons was for 123 members of the House. The contest was among 291 candidates in 119 electorates. In seven electorates, where candidates were unopposed, 300,000 eligible voters were excused from going to the polls.

Good Fishing This Weekend

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The Arkansas Game and Fish Commission said today fishing prospects for the week end are good in these places:

Arkansas County—Refuge Lakes, bream.
Faulkner—Lake Conway, bream bass.
Pike—Narrow Lake, bream bass.
Garland—Lake Quachita, bream bass.

MONKEY MOTHER OF THE YEAR—Tamba, Hollywood's educated chimp gets into practice for her approaching "blessed event." A star of many movies she has recently retired from the screen to await motherhood.

Ruling May Speed Aid to Schools

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two Democratic senators said today the Supreme Court's anti-segregation ruling may serve to speed proposals for federal aid to states for school construction.

Sen. Olin D. Johnston (D-SC) said last week's unanimous high court decision banning segregation in public schools "has already brought the federal government into the control of our public school policies as much as it can be."

Johnston said in an interview that the ruling "seemed to take away the argument that federal aid for the building of schools would give the federal government the right to force non-segregation in our public school system."

Sen. Long (D-La.) said the segregation decision makes "federal aid for school construction even more necessary than before."

Long said there would "continue to be a large amount of voluntary segregation." But he said that the pressure on Southern states to make schools "just as adequate" for colored as for white children was increased by the Supreme Court ruling.

"When we have better schools for colored children," he said, "there will not be as much admission on school boards to admit colored students into the schools in white neighborhoods."

A Senate labor subcommittee is studying several school construction aid measures, one of which, backed by Sen. Cooper (R-Ky.), the subcommittee chairman, would provide a four-year, 400 million-dollar federal aid program.

Search of Ship Reveals Nothing

PANAMA (AP)—French Ltee representatives say U. S. customs men on the hunt for contraband arms wound up their search of the freighter Wyoming last night without finding "anything abnormal."

While the Wyoming was held at the Atlantic mouth of the Panama Canal, officials in Washington said a vast sea search is under way for two ships suspected of carrying more Communist arms to leftist Guatemala. The Caribbean republic already has received a 2,000-ton arms shipment loaded at the Polish port of Stettin.

Customs men halted the Wyoming Wednesday as she headed for the canal en route to El Salvador and Guatemala with a cargo from London and Antwerp.

U. S. officials said the search was conducted with the full cooperation of the ship's owners and the French government.

There was no official announcement as to the results of the search, but the Panama Canal press office said last night the freighter's manifest listed six boxes of small arms, including one case of Browning automatic rifle, consigned to El Salvador. The Bar is a combat weapon.

Parents and children are invited to visit the exhibit at the library any day until June 1st.

No Doubt of Loyalty of Dr. Bunche

NEW YORK (UP)—A government investigating board announced today there is no doubt as to the loyalty of Dr. Ralph J. Bunche.

Bunche's clearance was announced by Pierre J. Gerety, chairman of the board in an unusual press conference summoned at the headquarters of the United States mission to the United Nations.

It came after two days of hearings for the Negro diplomat who is principal director of the United Nations trusteeship department. The board heard Bunche June 1 and 2 today.

Gerety, as chairman of the six-man international organizations employees loyalty board, issued the following statement:

"As a matter of justice to the individuals concerned, the international organizations employees loyalty board does not disclose any information concerning its proceedings. However, since the board was unable to prevent public disclosure of the fact that it was holding hearings concerning Dr. Ralph Bunche, it has decided to depart from its policy in this case and to make a prompt and public disclosure of its decision."

The full board held its second meeting with Dr. Bunche yesterday following which it unanimously reached the conclusion that there was no doubt as to the loyalty of Dr. Bunche.

Guatemala Kick Out Communist Secretary

GUATEMALA (AP)—Jose Maria Fortuny, head of Guatemala's Communist party and close adviser to President Jacobo Arbenz, was relieved of his post, party headquarters announced today.

The announcement said Fortuny was relieved as secretary general because of his health. But observers speculated it might indicate a split inside the party or that Arbenz was forced to remove him to remove the stigma of communism from the government.

Fortuny as secretary general was rated as top man in the nation's Communist party. He was also a member of the important national Democratic front with some observers believing he shaped government policy.

The independent newspaper Hora said Fortuny had been forced after a heated party meeting.

Another announcement said Defense Minister Jose Sanchez had decided not to remove the United States as planned until the situation eased.

The move came as tensions had been running high in the U. S. State Department. It was reported that Guatemala had been told to stop sending arms from behind the iron curtain and reports from Washington that the United States was planning of recalling its air and military missions to Guatemala.

In Washington, Sen. Smith (D-R.I.) said last night that the removal of Fortuny was a "Russian intervention in the internal affairs of Guatemala."

"We face the reality and the fact that the United States is intervening in the internal affairs of Guatemala," Sen. Smith said.

Pope Pius XII was to preside over the historic canonization of St. Peter's Basilica, the first in 242 years.

Reserved places were set for hundreds of bishops and 600 cardinals as various diplomatic envoys of the Vatican and special missions from around the world were expected to jam the truth square.

The solemn rites called Pope Pius XII to be borne in a portable throne through the square and to proclaim Giuseppe Saragat, a saint as a saint.

Outcome of Rail Rule Vote Unknown

By EDMORSE

Their contents—stock proxies voted for the present management headed by President William White or for the opposition forces headed by financier Robert R. Young—will decide who will run the railroad.

Young's proxies were in the safes and White's in the filing cabinets. After yesterday's rip-roaring annual meeting in the Washington Avenue Armory, attended by 2,000 stockholders, the proxies were taken to the 12th floor of the Hotel Ten Eyck.

There three law professors today began to supervise the laborious process of tabulating, separating the valid from the invalid, and judging challenges.

After 4 hours and 40 minutes of noise and at times disorder and confusion, the stockholders' meeting was recessed yesterday until noon next Tuesday, when the inspectors will report on the vote.

Some sources said it might be the first of several reports and the final one will be made by the inspectors.

Sunday School Lesson

By William E. Gilkey D. D.

Recently I strongly recommended a book by Mrs. Lynn "Great Ideas of the Bible" One thing that I particularly like about that book was its recognition of the progressive nature of the Bible's revelation of the truth concerning God and man.

So many books about the Bible treat it as if it were a single book, of equal truth and authority in all collection of many books (66 in the Bible, whereas the Bible is a Authorized Version).

The Bible has evolved over a long period, possibly as much as a thousand years, and reveals the progress from primitive and tribal conceptions of God to the revelation in the later prophets, and the fulfillment in Jesus, of the message concerning the God of all grace and the glorious Gospel of Timothy 1:11).

When Jesus spoke of the things that were said "by them of old time," and contrasted them with the things "that I say unto you," He was referring to things said in the Bible by good men in that former time, who lacked the light that Jesus was to give.

The progressive nature of the Bible, and the contrast that I am emphasizing is strongly brought out when one compares the incident of Elsha and the children (Matt. 23:23, 24) with the scene of Jesus blessing the little children (Matthew 19:13, 14).

Even the disciples had not progressed into that larger light of the Master, for they rebuked the mothers, who brought the children to Jesus, bring upon them the Master's distinct displeasure (Mark 10:14).

I have been told that that story of Elsha cursing the children and of their destruction by the bears is considered by many a perfectly proper moral tale for children.

To me it is a ninstance of how the moral sense and the elements of love and compassion which pervade so strongly inculcated by precept and example, can be perverted by mistaken religious views.

Particularly by emphasizing a wrong conception of the Bible which would justify on its authority the things which the Bible in its progressive and later teaching specifically condemns.

There is no longer of such misconceptions and misguided attitudes when one reads the Bible in the light of the New Testament, and in the light of Jesus' own attitude toward that great religion of Hebrew saints and prophets, which He said He had no come to destroy.

Bible, and the contrast that I am emphasizing is strongly brought out when one compares the incident of Elsha and the children (Matt. 23:23, 24) with the scene of Jesus blessing the little children (Matthew 19:13, 14).

Even the disciples had not progressed into that larger light of the Master, for they rebuked the mothers, who brought the children to Jesus, bring upon them the Master's distinct displeasure (Mark 10:14).

I have been told that that story of Elsha cursing the children and of their destruction by the bears is considered by many a perfectly proper moral tale for children.

To me it is a ninstance of how the moral sense and the elements of love and compassion which pervade so strongly inculcated by precept and example, can be perverted by mistaken religious views.

Particularly by emphasizing a wrong conception of the Bible which would justify on its authority the things which the Bible in its progressive and later teaching specifically condemns.

There is no longer of such misconceptions and misguided attitudes when one reads the Bible in the light of the New Testament, and in the light of Jesus' own attitude toward that great religion of Hebrew saints and prophets, which He said He had no come to destroy.

step under pressure. He talked so fast and so much it was as if he were afraid there might not be enough time left to get out all he wanted to say.

And McCarthy? His political career may depend on what he says and how he says it when he goes under cross-examination. He's put this kind of heat on other people. What will he do when it happens to him?

Maneuver of Hensel May Backfire

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Time will show whether or not Hensel was smart in letting the Senate subcommittee which is investigating the Army-McCarthy row dismiss him as a principal in the case.

That relieves Hensel 6-foot-4, assistant secretary of defense, from having to testify and be cross-examined by Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis) unless he's called back because of an unexpected turn in the hearings.

But Hensel had insisted on remaining in the case and testifying as a principal, he and his attorney, Frederick Bryan, would in turn have been able to put McCarthy through cross-examination.

Now, once these hearings are over and McCarthy resumes his role as chairman of the subcommittee, he can call Hensel before him and quiz him to his heart's content.

In that situation Hensel couldn't cross-examine McCarthy. He can't cross-examine a committee chairman. Further, if Hensel brought his attorney along to such a session, McCarthy could forbid the lawyer to ask a single question or make a statement. He has done that before with others.

And if McCarthy, when he resumes the chairmanship, doesn't call Hensel up before him, reporters are sure to ask him why in view of what he already has said about the assistant secretary.

On April 21, the day before the hearings began, McCarthy issued a 48-point bill of particulars answering charges made against him and his staff by Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens and Army Counselor John G. Adams.

Stevens, Adams and Hensel were — until the subcommittee dismissed Hensel yesterday — the principals in the case against McCarthy, his counsel Roy Cohn and Francis P. Carr, chief of his investigating staff.

In points 6 through 9 McCarthy explained he was looking for motives behind the Army charges. He fastened on Hensel as the master mind and said Hensel had a motive: to discredit McCarthy's committee.

McCarthy said his staff had been investigating Hensel himself and had "confirmed" a "serious allegation" against the assistant secretary of defense. The senator said that Hensel, in the top procurement post of the Navy during World War II, drew large sums of money from a ship's supply firm which was operating with government priorities. Hensel vigorously denied any wrongdoing.

After more wrangling the four subcommittee Republicans voted to do it and the three Democrats opposed. Dworshak said not enough evidence had been produced at the hearings so far to sustain the charges against the two men.

Bryan, attorney for Hensel, said he was in favor of Dworshak's motion because he regarded dismissal of the charges against his client as a victory.

Tarzan Would Like to Give Up Jungle

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I went into the jungle with a bunch of tinmedals and came out with gold."

That was Johnny Weissmuller's reflection on his 23 years in the movie business. How well I fixed because of his earnings in African movies, the onetime swimming champ says he may retire in another two years.

"I've had it," he says. "In another two years, I'd like to give up the jungle life and retire. I don't worry about me finding something to keep me busy. I'm a guy who likes his leisure. I'd be perfectly content to spend my time skin-diving, playing golf and just relaxing."

There's only one element that might upset his plans — TV. Right now a deal for a series is being whipped up. His agents and business managers are hot for it, but Johnny isn't enthusiastic.

That's understandable. He probably does less work for more money than any other performer in Hollywood. For the past eight years, he has been doing the Jungle Jim series in which he shares the profits. He does three a year, for an estimated return of $100,000. Not bad, considering the films take a mere nine days apiece.

Movie making takes only 27 days out of his year. What does he do the rest of the time? Occasionally he takes out a water chow, as he did in Las Vegas last year. But most of the time he simply enjoys life.

I must say that it agrees with him. I saw Johnny on the set of his latest Jungle Jim epic, "The Moon Men." He was up to his thighs in moon men — all the midgets and dwarfs in this area had been recruited for film. He'll be 47 next Wednesday, but he has the build and face of a much younger man.

I asked him how he does it.

"Swimming," he replied with the obvious answer. "I keep my poor old home at 80 degrees the year around. Ever day I swim about a half-mile. I do it with my feet in a rubber tube, so I'm pulling dead water. That way I get the exercise without having to make so many turns. The pool is only 20 by 40 feet, and I'd get dizzy if I swam without something to hold me back."

The daily workout keeps him at a trim 205-210 pounds, which is par for a man who is 6 feet 3. He was only 10 or 15 pounds lighter when he was breaking all the swimming records in sight.
